

SILVERED BORDER
PICTURES READY TO HANG.
FREE to All Advertisers AT ALL WORLD OFFICES.

FAIR

THE

WORLD'S EASTER
GREETING.

PRICE ONE CENT.

EXTRA. 2 O'CLOCK.

EXPERTS IN COURT.

Prominent Scientists to Testify for and Against Buchanan.

Didn't Want His Marriage Certificate Filed Immediately.

Clergyman Who Married the Doctor and Mrs. Sutherland Sworn.

The court chamber in which Recorder Smyth is trying Dr. Robert W. Buchanan for his lie, on the charge of poisoning his wife, Anna P. Sutherland Buchanan, by administering morphine to her husband, who was taken to nominate a candidate for Freeholder, had no nomination was made.

William Kern, President of the Jersey City Board of Fire Commissioners, received seven votes at each ballot, and John J. Lehman, a wholesale dealer at Washington Market, got five. The other three voters were scattering.

At midnight the convention adjourned until Wednesday evening.

One of the most clever and dangerous counterfeitors known.

Stephen C. Broadwell, alias Thomas Hunt, alias Harris, considered by the police of this and other cities to be one of the most dangerous and clever counterfeiters and forgers in the prison ward of Bellevue Hospital early this morning from a complication of diseases.

Broadwell was arrested in this city last month by Inspector McLaughlin's detectives, who had been searching for him more than a year. He was wanted at Cincinnati and Detroit, where he swindled several banks by raising checks.

On Monday, Feb. 26, Detectives Reilly and Von Gerichten found Broadwell in the house at 361 West Twenty-third street, where they gained admission by pretending to be Health Inspectors. He was indeed a hopeless invalid. He was indeed a hopeless invalid.

He was kept in the house under guard until a couple of weeks ago, when he was removed to Bellevue Hospital.

The dead forger was sixty-two years old.

He first came to the notice of the police in 1880, when he was arrested in this city for circulating a lot of counterfeit notes on the Spanish Bank at Havana. The bills were so skillfully forged that the bank, for its own protection, had to withdraw the whole issue of that particular bill.

Not long ago Broadwell tried to float another batch of counterfeit $25 bills on the same basis.

He was a merchant in this city, with whom he entered into a partnership to host the counterfeit in New York, Boston, and Philadelphia. He was arrested and sent to prison for five years April 4, 1881. After serving two years he was paroled.

In the early part of last year Broadwell swindled the First National, Third National and German National banks at Indianapolis for small amounts. He also swindled the National and City Savings Banks of Detroit out of $300 by raising "cheese" checks.

He was also accused of having forged checks for the First National, the Second National, and the First National, Indianapolis.

There was Dr. Franklin D. Lovins, an eminent surgeon, and Prof. Burrows, the pathologist, and toxicologists to the prosecution.

By request of Charles W. Brooks, of counsel for the accused, all the witnesses except the experts were excluded from the courtroom during the examination of other witnesses, but the experts were very much in evidence.

There was Prof. Witham, the great scientist in chemistry, whose careful analysis of the contents of the stomach of Helen Potts Harris made absolute proof that the capsule she took from the box given to her by Carlyle W. Harris was a morphine and not a similar capsule, and who performed a post-mortem on the body of the state with the suspicion around the Anna P. Buchanan had not died of anæsthesia, as certified by Dr. McIntyre as "the best case in the world." The court adjourned until Wednesday evening.

At the time of the trial, the Hudson County Board of Chosen Freeholders, addition to the several hundred thousand dollars of annual expenditures for the construction of the new boulevard, the great interest in the Spring election centers in the election of the members of this board.

HER HUSBAND TOLD HIM TO RUN.

Isaacson Did So, but Mrs. Gottlieb Gave Chase.

Mrs. Betty Gottlieb, of 98 Walton street, Williamsburg, was before Justice Goetting, in the Lee Avenue Court, today, on a charge of making threats to kill Morris Isaacson, an insurance broker, of 122 Walton street. Mrs. Gottlieb was accompanied by her pretty sixteen-year-old daughter, Rebecca, the cause of all the trouble.

Two months ago Isaacson was engaged to Miss Gottlieb, but at the last moment, when the wedding supper was provided, the insurance broker failed to come to the table.

Since then, as Isaacson says, his mother-in-law has been to his home, threatening the couple, and once, when the couple became too close, he caught up the time he was in the banks he visited. Isaacson, fearing for his arrest, was scattered about the country, and, finally, he got a place of more than a dozen horses in West, anxious to get him. His forgeries amounted to many thousands.

He was then arrested, but was not charged with a capital offense, and it is still impossible to testify as an expert in a case of alleged vegetable poisoning, because the police have not yet made a scientific analysis.

In spite of his release, Isaacson, who is a former member of the Hartshorne family, has had an eagle eye, because he perceives nothing unless it is a person.

Rev. Dr. David W. Lathrop, of 124 Elm street, Newark, was the first witness of the day. He testified that he performed the ceremony of marriage between Dr. Frank S. Sutherland and Mrs. Sutherland, the keeper of a slenderly housed #3137 Blahey street on Nov. 29, 1880.

He said that the bride gave her maiden name, Mrs. Anna P. Buchanan, a former marriage. Sutherland, Capt. William S. Dorn came with the couple and signed the certificate as a witness. So did Mrs. Isaacson.

He said that he had been asked to take out some documents and asked that telephone bring the record of the marriage with the Register of Vital Statistics a few days, because of some financial matter that was William D. Sullivan, lawyer and doctor, who has charge of the charitable part of the business.

There were a number of women present although much of the testimony is of a character that can bring the blush of shame to the court.

Dr. Buchanan resumed his place among the lawyers, his brief an eagle eye, because he perceives nothing unless it is a person.

Rev. Dr. David W. Lathrop, of 124 Elm street, Newark, was the first witness of the day. He testified that he performed the ceremony of marriage between Dr. Frank S. Sutherland and Mrs. Sutherland, the keeper of a slenderly housed #3137 Blahey street on Nov. 29, 1880.

He said that the bride gave her maiden name, Mrs. Anna P. Buchanan, a former marriage. Sutherland, Capt. William S. Dorn came with the couple and signed the certificate as a witness. So did Mrs. Isaacson.

He said that he had been asked to take out some documents and asked that telephone bring the record of the marriage with the Register of Vital Statistics a few days, because of some financial matter that was William D. Sullivan, lawyer and doctor, who has charge of the charitable part of the business.

There were a number of women present although much of the testimony is of a character that can bring the blush of shame to the court.

Dr. Buchanan resumed his place among the lawyers, his brief an eagle eye, because he perceives nothing unless it is a person.

Rev. Dr. David W. Lathrop, of 124 Elm street, Newark, was the first witness of the day. He testified that he performed the ceremony of marriage between Dr. Frank S. Sutherland and Mrs. Sutherland, the keeper of a slenderly housed #3137 Blahey street on Nov. 29, 1880.

He said that the bride gave her maiden name, Mrs. Anna P. Buchanan, a former marriage. Sutherland, Capt. William S. Dorn came with the couple and signed the certificate as a witness. So did Mrs. Isaacson.

He said that he had been asked to take out some documents and asked that telephone bring the record of the marriage with the Register of Vital Statistics a few days, because of some financial matter that was William D. Sullivan, lawyer and doctor, who has charge of the charitable part of the business.

There were a number of women present although much of the testimony is of a character that can bring the blush of shame to the court.

Dr. Buchanan resumed his place among the lawyers, his brief an eagle eye, because he perceives nothing unless it is a person.

Rev. Dr. David W. Lathrop, of 124 Elm street, Newark, was the first witness of the day. He testified that he performed the ceremony of marriage between Dr. Frank S. Sutherland and Mrs. Sutherland, the keeper of a slenderly housed #3137 Blahey street on Nov. 29, 1880.

He said that the bride gave her maiden name, Mrs. Anna P. Buchanan, a former marriage. Sutherland, Capt. William S. Dorn came with the couple and signed the certificate as a witness. So did Mrs. Isaacson.

He said that he had been asked to take out some documents and asked that telephone bring the record of the marriage with the Register of Vital Statistics a few days, because of some financial matter that was William D. Sullivan, lawyer and doctor, who has charge of the charitable part of the business.

There were a number of women present although much of the testimony is of a character that can bring the blush of shame to the court.

Dr. Buchanan resumed his place among the lawyers, his brief an eagle eye, because he perceives nothing unless it is a person.

Rev. Dr. David W. Lathrop, of 124 Elm street, Newark, was the first witness of the day. He testified that he performed the ceremony of marriage between Dr. Frank S. Sutherland and Mrs. Sutherland, the keeper of a slenderly housed #3137 Blahey street on Nov. 29, 1880.

He said that the bride gave her maiden name, Mrs. Anna P. Buchanan, a former marriage. Sutherland, Capt. William S. Dorn came with the couple and signed the certificate as a witness. So did Mrs. Isaacson.

He said that he had been asked to take out some documents and asked that telephone bring the record of the marriage with the Register of Vital Statistics a few days, because of some financial matter that was William D. Sullivan, lawyer and doctor, who has charge of the charitable part of the business.

There were a number of women present although much of the testimony is of a character that can bring the blush of shame to the court.

Dr. Buchanan resumed his place among the lawyers, his brief an eagle eye, because he perceives nothing unless it is a person.

Rev. Dr. David W. Lathrop, of 124 Elm street, Newark, was the first witness of the day. He testified that he performed the ceremony of marriage between Dr. Frank S. Sutherland and Mrs. Sutherland, the keeper of a slenderly housed #3137 Blahey street on Nov. 29, 1880.

He said that the bride gave her maiden name, Mrs. Anna P. Buchanan, a former marriage. Sutherland, Capt. William S. Dorn came with the couple and signed the certificate as a witness. So did Mrs. Isaacson.

He said that he had been asked to take out some documents and asked that telephone bring the record of the marriage with the Register of Vital Statistics a few days, because of some financial matter that was William D. Sullivan, lawyer and doctor, who has charge of the charitable part of the business.

There were a number of women present although much of the testimony is of a character that can bring the blush of shame to the court.

Dr. Buchanan resumed his place among the lawyers, his brief an eagle eye, because he perceives nothing unless it is a person.

Rev. Dr. David W. Lathrop, of 124 Elm street, Newark, was the first witness of the day. He testified that he performed the ceremony of marriage between Dr. Frank S. Sutherland and Mrs. Sutherland, the keeper of a slenderly housed #3137 Blahey street on Nov. 29, 1880.

He said that the bride gave her maiden name, Mrs. Anna P. Buchanan, a former marriage. Sutherland, Capt. William S. Dorn came with the couple and signed the certificate as a witness. So did Mrs. Isaacson.

He said that he had been asked to take out some documents and asked that telephone bring the record of the marriage with the Register of Vital Statistics a few days, because of some financial matter that was William D. Sullivan, lawyer and doctor, who has charge of the charitable part of the business.

There were a number of women present although much of the testimony is of a character that can bring the blush of shame to the court.

Dr. Buchanan resumed his place among the lawyers, his brief an eagle eye, because he perceives nothing unless it is a person.

Rev. Dr. David W. Lathrop, of 124 Elm street, Newark, was the first witness of the day. He testified that he performed the ceremony of marriage between Dr. Frank S. Sutherland and Mrs. Sutherland, the keeper of a slenderly housed #3137 Blahey street on Nov. 29, 1880.

He said that the bride gave her maiden name, Mrs. Anna P. Buchanan, a former marriage. Sutherland, Capt. William S. Dorn came with the couple and signed the certificate as a witness. So did Mrs. Isaacson.

He said that he had been asked to take out some documents and asked that telephone bring the record of the marriage with the Register of Vital Statistics a few days, because of some financial matter that was William D. Sullivan, lawyer and doctor, who has charge of the charitable part of the business.

There were a number of women present although much of the testimony is of a character that can bring the blush of shame to the court.

Dr. Buchanan resumed his place among the lawyers, his brief an eagle eye, because he perceives nothing unless it is a person.

Rev. Dr. David W. Lathrop, of 124 Elm street, Newark, was the first witness of the day. He testified that he performed the ceremony of marriage between Dr. Frank S. Sutherland and Mrs. Sutherland, the keeper of a slenderly housed #3137 Blahey street on Nov. 29, 1880.

He said that the bride gave her maiden name, Mrs. Anna P. Buchanan, a former marriage. Sutherland, Capt. William S. Dorn came with the couple and signed the certificate as a witness. So did Mrs. Isaacson.

He said that he had been asked to take out some documents and asked that telephone bring the record of the marriage with the Register of Vital Statistics a few days, because of some financial matter that was William D. Sullivan, lawyer and doctor, who has charge of the charitable part of the business.

There were a number of women present although much of the testimony is of a character that can bring the blush of shame to the court.

Dr. Buchanan resumed his place among the lawyers, his brief an eagle eye, because he perceives nothing unless it is a person.

Rev. Dr. David W. Lathrop, of 124 Elm street, Newark, was the first witness of the day. He testified that he performed the ceremony of marriage between Dr. Frank S. Sutherland and Mrs. Sutherland, the keeper of a slenderly housed #3137 Blahey street on Nov. 29, 1880.

He said that the bride gave her maiden name, Mrs. Anna P. Buchanan, a former marriage. Sutherland, Capt. William S. Dorn came with the couple and signed the certificate as a witness. So did Mrs. Isaacson.

He said that he had been asked to take out some documents and asked that telephone bring the record of the marriage with the Register of Vital Statistics a few days, because of some financial matter that was William D. Sullivan, lawyer and doctor, who has charge of the charitable part of the business.

There were a number of women present although much of the testimony is of a character that can bring the blush of shame to the court.

Dr. Buchanan resumed his place among the lawyers, his brief an eagle eye, because he perceives nothing unless it is a person.

Rev. Dr. David W. Lathrop, of 124 Elm street, Newark, was the first witness of the day. He testified that he performed the ceremony of marriage between Dr. Frank S. Sutherland and Mrs. Sutherland, the keeper of a slenderly housed #3137 Blahey street on Nov. 29, 1880.

He said that the bride gave her maiden name, Mrs. Anna P. Buchanan, a former marriage. Sutherland, Capt. William S. Dorn came with the couple and signed the certificate as a witness. So did Mrs. Isaacson.

He said that he had been asked to take out some documents and asked that telephone bring the record of the marriage with the Register of Vital Statistics a few days, because of some financial matter that was William D. Sullivan, lawyer and doctor, who has charge of the charitable part of the business.

There were a number of women present although much of the testimony is of a character that can bring the blush of shame to the court.

Dr. Buchanan resumed his place among the lawyers, his brief an eagle eye, because he perceives nothing unless it is a person.

Rev. Dr. David W. Lathrop, of 124 Elm street, Newark, was the first witness of the day. He testified that he performed the ceremony of marriage between Dr. Frank S. Sutherland and Mrs. Sutherland, the keeper of a slenderly housed #3137 Blahey street on Nov. 29, 1880.

He said that the bride gave her maiden name, Mrs. Anna P. Buchanan, a former marriage. Sutherland, Capt. William S. Dorn came with the couple and signed the certificate as a witness. So did Mrs. Isaacson.

He said that he had been asked to take out some documents and asked that telephone bring the record of the marriage with the Register of Vital Statistics a few days, because of some financial matter that was William D. Sullivan, lawyer and doctor, who has charge of the charitable part of the business.

There were a number of women present although much of the testimony is of a character that can bring the blush of shame to the court.

Dr. Buchanan resumed his place among the lawyers, his brief an eagle eye, because he perceives nothing unless it is a person.

Rev. Dr. David W. Lathrop, of 124 Elm street, Newark, was the first witness of the day. He testified that he performed the ceremony of marriage between Dr. Frank S. Sutherland and Mrs. Sutherland, the keeper of a slenderly housed #3137 Blahey street on Nov. 29, 1880.

He said that the bride gave her maiden name, Mrs. Anna P. Buchanan, a former marriage. Sutherland, Capt. William S. Dorn came with the couple and signed the certificate as a witness. So did Mrs. Isaacson.

He said that he had been asked to take out some documents and asked that telephone bring the record of the marriage with the Register of Vital Statistics a few days, because of some financial matter that was William D. Sullivan, lawyer and doctor, who has charge of the charitable part of the business.

There were a number of women present although much of the testimony is of a character that can bring the blush of shame to the court.

Dr. Buchanan resumed his place among the lawyers, his brief an eagle eye, because he perceives nothing unless it is a person.

Rev. Dr. David W. Lathrop, of 124 Elm street, Newark, was the first witness of the day. He testified that he performed the ceremony of marriage between Dr. Frank S. Sutherland and Mrs. Sutherland, the keeper of a slenderly housed #3137 Blahey street on Nov. 29, 1880.